A Message from Stephanie

Hello,

As some of you know, on June 3rd I fell while coaching my son's soccer team and fractured a bone in my ankle. I'm in an Aircast and will be for at least the next four weeks. Luckily editing is a "sit-down" position.

I had hoped to offer a workshop this month in place of Writers' Work, but a few complications have arisen and that will have to be postponed. I'll be in touch when we have a new date and venue. So I hope that you enjoy your summer and that you'll be able to make it to some of the events we will be attending and offering. Make sure to read future newsletters to stay current on upcoming events.

In the meantime, we have two new books out this month: I Call Your Name by Virginia Young and The Black Fairy and Other Fantasy Stories by Patricia Perry. Having read both, I know that these are books you will thoroughly enjoy!

A number of other books – non-fiction, creative non-fiction, children's, and a cozy – are also on the list for summer and early fall releases. Stay tuned for more information.

The Cape Cod Writers Center will be holding their 53rd Cape Cod Writers Center Conference from August 6th-9th at the Resort and Conference Center at Hyannis, Massachusetts. If you are interested in learning about all of the wonderful courses available, please check out their website:

<http://capecodwriterscenter.org/conference-2/>. I'll be there offering A Primer on Self-Publishing, Fri.-Sun. 8:30-10 a.m. The description: When two roads diverge in a papered path, which way should you turn? Fortunately authors can choose the road to total control through self-publishing, allowing you to reap all of the rewards for your efforts. This workshop will discuss the steps needed to produce a quality product, including instructions for uploading the final work to CreateSpace and Kindle. If you are interested in learning about the steps that go into getting a book into print and out to readers, this course will show you all of the ins and outs.

Riverhaven will also have a booth again this year at the Plymouth Waterfront Festival on August 29th. Cross your fingers for good weather for us, and stop by to say hello and see all of the wonderful books we will have to offer.

Also, please remember that our books are available at Somethin's Brewin' Book Café in Lakeville and at The Flying Pig Emporium in Whitman. And you can always order through our online store at www.RiverhavenBooks.com.

Happy reading & happy writing!

All the best, Stephanie
